Hello,

The contractor working on my kitchen expansion project at 55 Romasco Lane tells me that he has arranged for an inspection this Thursday (9/11). However, it sounds like there might be some confusion about the foundation on the project and he asked me to drop you a line to clarify.

The contractor was told that the inspector may want to view the footings of the foundation. This kitchen expansion uses an existing foundation, not new construction. This can be seen in section A3 of the permit application and is noted as "Storage Room". The foundation is visible from the inside if that is useful.

If you would like to discuss this further or need any additional information you can call either me or the contractor on the project at the numbers below:

Thanks for your time,
