Ludicrous reason. I worked their for over 6 months and found this to be ridiculous. During this work the owner Jon Bradbery had rented a jack hammer and was ripping up the basement releasing a horrible smell in the entire building which went into the elevator shaft upon which the upper tenants complained and had the building manager called which said he had no permits to do such work. My concern is this work is still being performed with food in the area and the dust is making its way to the containers where customers could be eating off of it. I was able to take photos (assume why I was fired) that night and will attach to this email.

If you have any questions please call me.
Thank you for your time

To whom this may concern,

On Saturday the 10th I was let go from the staff after mentioning I did not agree with the work being performed in the basement of the building. I had sat in the office with one of the owners and as soon as the other owner arrived I was let go for a
