Subject: Building permit for installation of automatic fire detection and alarm system in the apartment house at 237 High Street

Dear Madam & Gentlemen:

To avoid any misunderstanding as to the power supply for operating this system it seems best to make clear that the permit is issued based on one of two alternatives:

Either that suitable dry batteries will be the sole power supply

Or, if the house current through a transformer is to be used for the primary power supply with dry batteries as "standby" with automatic change-over in case of failure of the alternating current, the test button will be so connected and arranged that it will test the batteries only by ringing the alarm gong, thus testing the entire system except the alternating current supply through the transformer.

One or the other of the above arrangements is considered necessary to satisfy the provisions of the Building Code which reads: "The system shall be automatically actuated by electricity from storage of dry batteries or by means equivalent thereto in reliability of performance." If, for any reason, one or the other schema is not acceptable, let us talk the matter over before the installation is started.

The owner, who is receiving a copy of this letter, is advised that the fire protection authorities who are in the best position to judge of such matters assert that those responsibly in charge of the maintenance of such fire alarm systems can only discharge their responsibility by seeing to it that the system is tested once each day. Only a touch of the button or test switch is necessary to ascertain if the alarm bells ring, and those who know say that this daily testing improves the batteries and increases their length of life considerably over less frequent testing.

Very truly yours,

Inspector of Buildings
