It would be that 1. your permit application (s) came with a demo of existing structure permit application as well. That would show you were demo-ing a structure. 2. You only state on your permit application "remodel" (not really clear what the scope of work is.) Also, the application itself does need to be completely filled out. If you can re-submit the application page with appropriate project description and other pertinent information filled out, we can enter the permit application.

What made you think my intentions were to demo the entire house?? I had a pre-planning meeting in your office last week to get instruction on how to proceed. I explained that we wanted to demo and rebuild the 5'X7' rear entrance as a half bath, not the whole house. We also would like to renovate the kitchen and upstairs bathroom. I hope this clears things up. I will come into the office monday.

best regards,
Jason

Also, please make sure you fill out all application information in it's ENTIRETY. It's there for a reason and we do need all the data filled in.

Jason, if you are demo-ing a full home and then rebuilding, your not presenting the correct application OR paperwork...You will need to provide the attached one and provide everything in the checklist as well for BOTH the demo and the rebuild. I will be deleting the e-mail you sent because it is insufficient for what you are planning (based on what I read on your application(s) and documents provided.
