Good morning Jonathan -

Thanks for your feed back. I am wondering if you have a complete set of plans where as most of what you have listed is on the plans. The spacing for the columns is in the foundation plans. The size of the girder is in the cross section. I have attached the plans in case you are missing a page. I started to go through your list and am realizing that I should just schedule a time to meet with you to go through this since I to have questions as to what you are asking for. I will bring in anything that is not listed on the plans with me as you have noted. I will call later to try and set up a time to meet sometime this week.

Thanks for your input and time.

The information below was missing on the building permit application. The floor framing plans/ cross sections need to indicate the (3) 2 x 12 girder spans/ spacing between each lally column; the roof framing plan must show how the dormer meets the 2 by 10 inch rafters, with finished headroom. All bulleted items require a response for permit issuance.

Good morning Jonathan -

Thanks for your feed back. I am wondering if you have a complete set of plans where as most of what you have listed is on the plans. The spacing for the columns is in the foundation plans. The size of the girder is in the cross section. I have attached the plans in case you are missing a page. I started to go through your list and am realizing that I should just schedule a time to meet with you to go through this since I to have questions as to what you are asking for. I will bring in anything that is not listed on the plans with me as you have noted. I will call later to try and set up a time to meet sometime this week. Thanks for your input and time.

All bulleted items require a response for permit issuance.
