Who is Cultural Survival?

One out of every 20 people on this planet is indigenous. But all too often their rights are trampled by powerful economic interests, poorly considered development policies, and globalization that encourages cultural homogeneity.

Cultural Survival, the leading U.S.-based international indigenous rights organization, works to remedy these injustices. Founded in 1972, Cultural Survival has helped indigenous peoples to protect their traditions, preserve the environment, and make their own choices about their futures.

Cultural Survival provides indigenous communities with the education and expertise they need to be better self-advocates, and partners with them to defend their human rights. Through its programs and publications, Cultural Survival raises the awareness of policy makers, scholars, the media, and the public about indigenous peoples' rights, cultures, and concerns.

What are Cultural Survival Bazaars?

"The Cultural Survival Bazaar brings together the work of dozens of skilled artisans and craftspeople from around the world in one place. With each step you take, the sights, smells and sounds will transport you to a time and place in another land. Our members and friends come back year after year for this colorful event." --Pia Maybury-Lewis, Co-founder of Cultural Survival

Cultural Survival Bazaar visitors experience myriad cultures and goods at these vibrant events that celebrate the music, food, and crafts of more than 60 indigenous groups from around the world. Serving as both a vehicle for educating the public about the rights, cultures, and concerns of indigenous peoples, and a fund raiser for Cultural Survival and its indigenous partners, the Bazaars are unique and unforgettable cultural experiences.

Every year Cultural Survival invites more than 50 retail vendors who are committed to ethical business practices and fair trade principles to sell their traditional crafts, artwork, carpets, and home accessories at the Bazaar. Cultural Survival also involves local indigenous tribes and communities in these events. Thousands of New England residents take advantage of the Bazaars for globally-minded shopping and the opportunity it presents to learn more about indigenous cultures and the work of Cultural Survival.

Highlights of the Bazaars include live music and cultural demonstrations by indigenous performers. Wares offered include hand-blown Guatemalan glass, Batik fabric from Bali, African carvings, Maasai and Navajo jewelry, Baltic hand-woven linen, Thai silk, hand-knotted rugs from the Middle East, Indian textiles, Ecuadorian paintings, Peruvian alpaca sweaters, and much more.

The Bazaars are popular with local residents, college communities, indigenous rights supporters, and civic-minded individuals with an interest in supporting socially responsible businesses, fair trade, and fair labor practices. Forty percent of all sales benefit Cultural Survival and its programs.

Cultural Survival Bazaars present the opportunity to build positive community relations, while celebrating the diverse cultures of the world.

How are Cultural Survival Bazaars organized?

Winter Bazaars are held indoors at universities, art centers, and other spaces with 3,000 to 6,000 square feet of space. For the past 26 years, Cultural Survival's main winter Bazaar has been held on the Harvard University campus in Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Summer Bazaars are held under a large tent (40'x 100') in open green areas, in the style of Moroccan bazaars. Beautiful hand-knotted rugs line the floor and world music fills the air as people from all over the globe congregate to sell their wares. Cultural Survival first introduced its summer Bazaar five years ago in Tiverton, Rhode Island; the event continues to grow and becomes more successful every year.

These weekend events are free and open to the public of all ages. The bazaars are predominantly staffed by experienced volunteers and Cultural Survival employees, who set up, manage, run, break down, and clean up after the event. All sales are run through a central cash register. Customers receive purchase sheets, and each sale is recorded by the appropriate vendor. Sales receipts are double checked by volunteers as customers leave the Bazaar.

Attendance varies depending on dates and locations, however, attendance at past Bazaars has averaged 3,000 to 5,000 people over the course of a weekend. Cultural Survival secures all required permits and security detail if the event is held in a public space. Portable restrooms are provided if the event is outdoors. All events are handicap accessible.

What does Cultural Survival look for in a Bazaar location?

- 1) A community of globally-minded individuals interested in multicultural events
- 2) Adequate space: 3,000 to 6,000 square feet of indoor space for a winter bazaar
Open green space large enough to accommodate a 40'x 100' tent for a summer bazaar
- 3) Adequate parking in the immediate area
- 4) Electrical capability for cash registers
- 5) Access to phone lines (where available) for credit card machines
- 6) Hours open to the public are 10am to -6pm
