Building permit to construct a dwelling, 18'4" x 40', as per plans submitted with the application, is being issued because this is a replacement of an existing building, subject to the following.

1. A permit will need to be taken out by the contractor who is to demolish the present structure.
2. There is some confusion on your girder. Your cross section plans show the floor joists on a span of 18'4". However, the floor planing plan shows floor joists resting on a double 2 x 8 without a girder. I am issuing this permit with the understanding that the joists cross the building and rest on the girder. If this is not so, before the floor planing starts, contact this office so that we may refigure the floor load.
3. The chimney shown shall extend at least 3' above the adjacent roof, and at least 2' above any roof ridge within 10' thereof. If you have any question on this requirement, please contact this office.

Very truly yours,

A. Allan Soule
